

ALEXANDRIA, VA.

FRIDAY EVENING, APRIL 28, 1882.

THE REPUBLICANS and Mahoneites of Norfolk have coalesced and nominated a mixed municipal ticket composed of whites and blacks; the same parties in Danville have also entirely abolished the lines that once nominally divided them and have become one organization. Indeed the union of the republicans with the Mahoneites has become a generally acknowledged fact, and so good a readjuster paper as the Front tested election case, General Hooker of Mis-Royal Readjuster says, "it is plain to all the world that General Mahone and other leaders have gone over to the republicans and are trying to carry the readjuster party with them." Attorney-General Blair has already announced that hereafter he intends to vote the republican ticket. This union of the two parties, it will be observed, is not solely for the purpose of affecting national and State affairs; not only to support the Administration, but also to obtain the petty municipal offices in the State. And it is to effect that object that General Mahone would carry the twenty thousand white men who voted his ticket last fall into the republican party. It is not believed he will succeed; nor is it supposed that the conscientious men among the republican party will assist him, because the Mahoneites, being actuated entirely by a desire to retain or obtain office, will assume the role of leaders in a party of which they will form an insignificant faction, and men whose political actions are inspired by principle will not of their own accord subject themselves to such rulers. Indeed Virginians, whether republicans or democrats, and whether native or adopted citizen of the State, would be opposed to the boss system even if it were conducted in the most exemplary manner, and therefore execrate it as practiced by General Mahone, and if a as practiced by General Mahone, and if a and take the testimony of Mr. Bliss, of the democrat were vain enough to attempt the Credit Industriel, and Mr. Randall, brother character in his party that General Mohone is playing in his, he would make himself the laughing stock of the whole State, and would find charms even in solitude.

Mr. Camp, a republican leader in the U. And yet it Judge L. L. Lewis, Judge Finnell and other award of the contract had been made and the state under authority of the act of March is with the party of which these rancorous prominent republicans and readjusters have their enjoined secrecy. Dyson said he 30, 1871, whose value depends upon prompt that General Mahone would carry the voted with him last fall on a State question,

THE MAHONEITES easily dupe the negroes of Virginia, but they need not flatter themselves with the idea that they deceive reasoning people either in the North or South. The Philadelphia Record for instance says:

"Of all the political work carried on under the "Independent" flag perhaps Mahone's campaigns in Virginia furnish the vilest specimens. His success, short-lived as it has been, has done infinite harm in the State of Virginia, and has weakened the credit of every State in the South which has a

The two judges who think the law unconstitutional have always thought so, adjourned without consummating the plan. while Judge Staples has always thought the reverse, and as Judge Burks may have had some doubt on the subject he probably voted with the latter for the purpose of sending the case to the court whose decision will be final. Had a decision of the court been given in favor of the unconstitutionality of the law, the Mahoneites would have said it was made by a Bourbon court, and the question would have remained an open one for an indefinite period, but as it is it will be closed within a short time and be removed from the domain of politics. There is no doubt that the Supreme Court will render a decision in favor of the payment of the debt, of the legality of the coupons and of the unconstitutionality of all the Mahone legislation upon the subject of the Virginia

The House this morning resumed the consideration of the Lynch-Chalmers consissippi leading off in an able and eloquent speech in favor of the sitting member. General Chalmers. In the course of his remarks in reply to an assertion by Mr. Moore of Tennessee to the effect that a merchant of Mississippi had told him that he was a reedge it lest his business would be rumed, he said that if a black man had the courage to stand up before a large audience and make such a speech as Lynch had, the white man there who was afraid to acknowledge his political opinions must possess a liver as pale as his skin, and that Mr. Moore was not only mistakea but his statement was an imputation upon the courage of the republicans of Mississippi which amounted slander. Mr. Moore's assertion that would mention the name of his informant, if it were safe to do so, was received with contemptuous laughter on the democratic side. as it revived the memory of Mr. Dawes's famous "gray haired man" of last Spring.— Mr. J. R. Tucker of Virginia followed General Hooker on the same side, and exposed in all its nakedness the republican assumption that because the negroes in any locality of the South may be in the majority that locality must of necessity be republican. He also rang the charges on the indisputable fact that with all their auxiety to bestow offices upon negroes in the South, the republicans took good care to give them none n the North.

that effect. I feel bound, therefore, not to solve my doubts against the validity of the acts. Previous to the act of January 14. 1882, the holder of a coupon had his remedy by mandamus, proceedings on which were regulated by provissions to be found in the code of 1873 chapter 151. This remedy was not wholy abolished by the act in question. It was only modfied and the proceding sunder the writ somewhat altered. Remedy by the writ according to my construction, is entirely taken away in cases like the present by the subsequent act of April 7, 1882. Legislation is necessary to enable this court to exercise its original jurisdiction by mandamus under the constution. The remedy provided as a substitute for the writ is found n sections 1, 2 and 3 of the acts of Jan., 14, 1882. The question is whether it is an adequate substitute for the remedy abolished? If it is not, then, according to a long line of decissions of the Supreme Court of the Uni- Ventilation to enquire into the practicability ted States, which need not be cited, it cannot be sustained.
